NOTES AND COMMENTS.

We desire to call attention to a letter published in this issue which was extracted from a Shanghai contemporary strongly recommending every Englishman in China (including Scotchmen, Irishmen and men of all the many races and peoples that acknowledge English rule) to tend to their friends, and to as many of them as possible, the printed accounts of the massacre at Kucheng, that the horrible details of that massacre may be as widely known as possible, and a universal spirit of anger and indignation may be aroused throughout the English-speaking world. We desire to reiterate and enforce this recommendation. We want every resident in Hongkong to send to his or her friends the full details of this horrible tragedy that they may be stirred up to demand from the British Government action stern and swift. We want the picture of little Mildred, only twelve years old, painfully dragging the body of her baby brother, since dead, from beneath the blood-stained corpse of the nurse, to be brought before the mind's eye of every mother in England, and of the mothers and sisters and wives of every voter in England that they may understand what is the real meaning of the phrase "Massacre of Missaries at Kucheng." It does not matter what account is sent, the one this office has published, or one of those emanating from the offices of our contemporaries, if only one is sent to every home in England. Do not let our indignation and anger burn out with the attendance at a meeting, however unanimous and enthusiastic, and the passing of a vote of censure on the government. Let us individually do our level best to excite the same feeling of anger and indignation in the breast of every man, woman and child we can influence, and let us keep up the agitation until steps have been taken by our government to render such terrible sacrifices if not impossible most terrible.

We note that a most cordial vote of thanks was rendered to Mr. Jackson at the meeting of the shareholders in the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation held on Saturday. Never was a vote of thanks more thoroughly deserved, and we do not know that there is a single person in any degree conversant with the position of affairs in the East in financial and commercial circles who does not concur in it to the fullest extent. Mr. Jackson is a financial genius, if genius consists, as some say it does, in the capability of taking pains, of giving close and minute attention to details. Mr. Jackson has for over 29 years now given us all his skill, his energy, his powers of mind to the close study of the affairs of the Hongkong Bank to which he has been attached for all that period. He entered its service on the 1st of August 1866. He has mastered the business in all its amplitude and in all its minutiae. He has mastered the science and art and the whole mystery of Banking, and he has made himself capable of grasping the whole of the Bank's enormous business in one comprehensive glance and of determining unerringly what shall be its relations with the rest of the world of business and of finance. There are many excellent Bank managers in the world as there are in all armies many excellent generals of Brigade or of Division, each thoroughly capable of managing their command; but there are very few—there are to be counted on one's fingers—who have the knowledge, the insight, the power of combination, the mastery to handle not a division, not a corps d'armée, but many divisions, several corps d'armée, or, a financial institution comprising many branches, many agencies, embracing interests so widespread and so vast. We congratulate Mr. Jackson on the success of his efforts to restore the Hongkong Bank to the position it is entitled to take in the world of finance, and to repair the injuries inflicted on it during the reign of less competent managers-in-chief—men not incompetent but not of the calibre for such a position. We congratulate the shareholders on the position in which they once again find themselves, and on the good sense that enables them to accept a less ample dividend than they would like to see distributed in deference to the wisdom and better judgment of their Chief Manager.

We note that no one outside the charmed circle of official life has yet seen the despatches from the Secretary of State on the subject of the Military Contribution. The official-unofficial members of Council—Messrs. CHARTER, EXETER, M. COCONOX and Company—have been supplied with copies for their private information but they are, in their hands, confidential documents, and if any one suggests that they have seen such things they are at once put on an innocent air of non-comprehension, and desire to know what papers in particular are being referred to. We note that in Singapore recently the unofficial members (who, by the way, are not officials in disguise) are complaining that the Government or the Governor there is improperly seeking to obtain their individual opinions on important financial questions by means of minutes circulated from hand to hand, when he is only entitled to their advice in open Council and when they are only entitled to give their opinions after or in the course of open and public discussion in Council, where they can have the advantage of hearing the opinions and arguments of their colleagues, official and unofficial. With the knowledge we possess of what has been done in private conferences in Hongkong in the past we are entitled to assume, and we do believe, that these despatches are being concealed from the public, and have been communicated to the members of Council, to avoid public criticism and public discussion, and with a view to obtain from the unofficial members of Council their assent to the terms of these despatches and to any necessary legislative measures or votes, before they have been instructed by public opinion, enlightened by the wisdom of the press, or aided in the formation of sound opinions by public discussion and debate with their colleagues.

We have no doubt whatever that our suggestions will be scoffed at and that we will be accused of impugning to honorable gentlemen motives and objects they never dreamed of. Then why do they do things that lay them open to these suspicions? Every one acts from some motive. Why are not these despatches published? Why are they circulated secretly among the members of Council? Why are they treated as confidential? They have been made public in Singapore; there can be no good reason for the delay and concealment here. If there is any good reason let it be stated. We shall be very glad indeed to hear, too, that members of Council have not been asked, as they were with reference to the Sanitary Board, to furnish their opinions individually and in writing to the Government, and that they have not been minutely papers circulated to obtain their views on any questions arising out of or connected with this question of the military contribution.

THE Waku Tatsu, leaving trouble in his district, lately issued a proclamation enjoining the people on no account to interfere with the foreign missionaries, and explaining that while Japan was lately at war with China, all other nations were friendly. He adds that now the war is finished, Japan and China are again good friends.
